Lesson 506

	Words
The eruption of the volcano was most impressive and	9 presented researchers a unique chance to study its	17 destructive and explosive force. The sensation of the	25 blast was like a massive concussion. All of the detection	35 meters were defective, and no one was perceptive enough	44 to predict the position of the explosion's center. The	53 reaction among the captive audience was one of expressive	62 tension.	63
When the blast came there was a collective gasp and	73 commotion and then protective actions were taken. One	81 woman in the room took a defensive position under the	91
table against the objections of her production assistant. I	100 was impartial but attentive to the vibration of the occasion.	110
My perception was that the reaction of the crowd was very	121 responsive to the direction of the officials.	128
Then there was an explosion that rocked us like a car	139 collision. My attention was crucial. My initial response	147 was to yield to temptation and go have a transfusion, but in	159
the end I did not, and instead I directed others to a	171 physician station. What an occasion the whole condition	179 presented.	180
It seemed like we were facing extinction, and I could not	191 think of a solution to the abusive sensation. We all acted	202 with caution, and I had the notion that we must take	213 evasive action. The reaction among all was positive, and so	223
we acted without division that would have been wrong. No	233 one was talkative, but we were decisive and that is how we	245 survived that less than festive day.	251
